

A Good Word for John Chenault.

"The race that John B. Chenault is making for State Auditor is as gratifying to his friends as it is surprising to his opponents. When the party authorities decided on a primary he accepted the conditions without a protest. He was prepared to submit his claims to the representatives of the people in a delegate convention or to the people themselves at the polls. By either method he only demanded fair play. He has no alliances, preferring to leave that manner of campaigning to those who find it necessary to secure the support of other candidates to bolster up their failing fortunes.

Mr. Chenault has not sought a place on any slate that has been or that might be formed. He believes that the voters should be free to make their own choice without dictation from any quarter. He bears no ill will toward his opponent, and in all the other State races he is avoiding the slightest suggestion of interference. He wishes his fellow candidates good luck in their respective contests.

Mr. Chenault is making as thorough a canvass of the various counties as the time at his disposal will permit. He has not wasted an hour since the call for a primary went forth. Proceeding on the idea that what is worth having is worth going after, he has gone to the homes of the Democracy of Kentucky, and in his frank, manly, attractive fashion, has presented his claims to the people, and they have answered his appeal in a generous, heart-warming way. In every district, and practically in every county, he has drawn about him the strongest men in their respective neighborhoods until his name is repeated with genuine enthusiasm all over the State.

To know John Chenault is to be his friend. He has a disposition that is sunny and sweet, and light out of eyes that would illumine an ordinary man's existence. The kindness that brightens his face and keeps his heart young radiates to his fellow men and all who come in contact with him are full sharers in his good nature but back of his gentleness is a courage and determination that rounds out his character. He translates the word, duty, literally. In his official life he sets a high standard, believing that the public service demands all that is best in him. His record commends him as heartily to the public as his personal qualities endear him to his friends. It is a pleasure for those who know him best to serve him without hope of reward, confident that in furthering his promotion they are doing the State a service.

By training, habits and experience, Mr. Chenault will make an ideal Auditor. He has thorough knowledge of the duties of this important office, and he will bring to it a clear mind and a vigorous body. It will be fortunate for the Democracy to have John Chenault nominated. No matter what others will be humiliated, he will bring as large a measure of personal worth and popularity to the ticket as any man that can be named.

The above, which we copy from the Louisville Critic, is a deserving compliment to this sterling gentleman and noble democrat, who now comes asking for your support. We say Chenault for Auditor, first, last and all the time.

WHO WILL BE WINNERS?

Free Trips to World's Fair For Most Popular Teachers.

EXHIBIT ASSOCIATION'S BIG OFFER.

One to Be Elected From Every County in the State—Full Details of the Plan—Description of the Kentucky Building to Be Erected at Exposition.

Who is the most popular school teacher in this county?

The Kentucky Exhibit association wants to know, and this week puts out a plan for finding out. Whoever it may be, he or she will be given a freetrip to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis next year, the association paying every expense, including railroad transportation to and from St. Louis, six days' board at one of the best hotels in the Mound City and admission six days to the World's Fair. This is an opportunity that should appeal to every educator in the state. The exposition will be the greatest international event of the kind ever held, the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 not excepted. One entire building is devoted to education, and in it Kentucky will have 2,500 square feet of space. This alone is a sufficient attraction for school teachers, but every building will hold out an inducement to all visitors, so the entire six days to be spent on the grounds will be one valuable series of lessons that could not be learned elsewhere.

The plan of the Exhibit association, by which the most popular school teacher in every county in Kentucky will be given the trip to the exposition, is set forth in detail in our advertising columns. It contemplates the selection of the most popular teacher by a voting process that gives to every school child in the state, his or her parents, sisters, brothers, aunts and uncles a chance to participate in the election. The right of franchise is denied no one in this interesting contest.

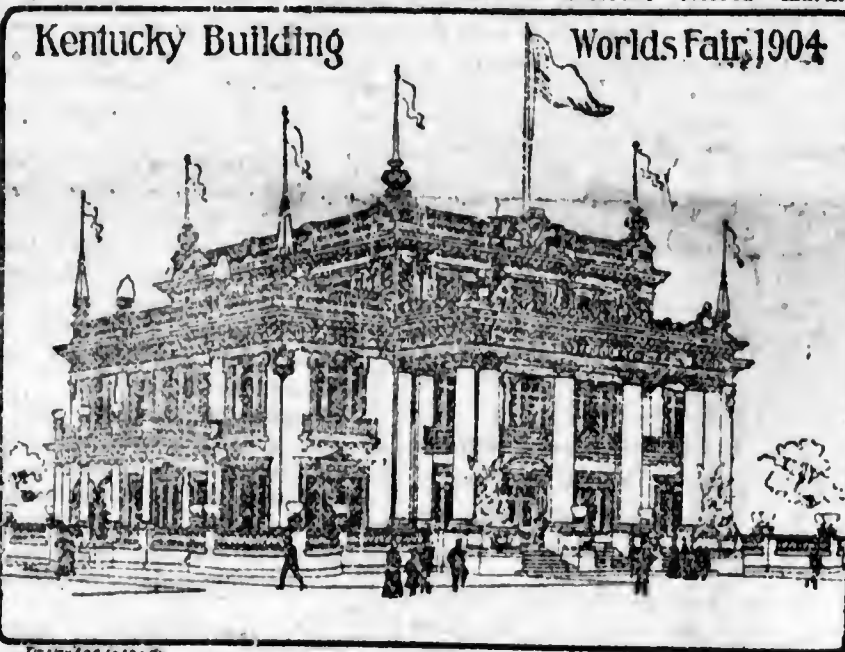

Beginning at once the association will receive at its headquarters in give to the county casting the largest number of votes—Jefferson excepted—the privilege of sending two teachers to the fair at its expense, the most popular teacher and the second most popular teacher.

The association has mailed to every teacher in the state, whose name it was possible to obtain, the plan in detail, and it will be read to his or her school, if in session now, or when opened during the summer. The contest will not close until every school in the state has had a chance to vote. Professor H. V. McChesney, state superintendent of public instruction, has given his hearty endorsement to this contest, and has issued a letter to the public school teachers of the state suggesting that they read to their schools the details of the plan and help in the contest.

The contest is not confined to the public school teachers of the state, however. Every educator is eligible to election, whether teaching in private or public school, or whether a member of the faculty of an academy, college or university. The medical, dental and theological institutions may also enter their teachers in the contest. The Catholic schools of the state are also expected to vote, and in this way the contest will prove one of the most interesting perhaps ever conducted in the commonwealth.

To give the public and school children an idea of the building, into the erection of which their dimes and dollars will go, after the school teachers' expenses are paid, the association herewith presents a cut of the Kentucky building. It will cover an area of 138 feet by 108 feet, including porches and verandas, the building proper being 97 feet by 62 feet. The exterior is symmetrical and well-balanced, in the classic style of architecture, and is richly decorated. Entirely surrounded by porches and verandas, entrances are on all four sides, with the broad sides of the building emphasized by great massive porches, which are flanked with sculpture groups symbolical of mines, forestry, manufactures and agriculture and horticulture. The feature of the interior is the large reception hall, 56 feet by 60 feet, with a hard wood floor. Along the walls of the hall exhibits will be placed. In the floor will be a marble mosaic center piece, about 26 feet square, showing the counties of Kentucky in different colored marbles.

Louisville votes in ballots of ten each. Everybody is invited to vote on the ballot to be clipped from the plan in another column of this issue. There ten spaces for votes, each vote representing ten cents. School children may form clubs of ten each and send one dollar to the association, and thereby cast ten votes for their favorite teacher. This privilege is also offered to the public in general. It is possible, in fact desirable, for one person to cast ten votes at a time by writing his or her name across the ten spaces and forwarding one dollar to the association.

The association does not require the signature of any voter, but is especially anxious to have all school children sign their names plainly, so they may make therefrom a list of thousands and thousands of the coming men and women of Kentucky for enrollment in the Kentucky building to be erected at the exposition.

All of the money derived from this plan, over and above the expense of the most popular teachers of the state, will go towards the erection of the Kentucky building at the fair. Those voting in this contest will thus have the satisfaction of knowing that they have not only assisted in the election of their favorite teacher, but have contributed no little to the movement that will result in the most successful representation ever given the state at an exposition of this kind.

The Kentucky building at the fair will cost about $30,000, and if the interest hoped for by the association is displayed in this school teachers' popularity contest, there will be no trouble in erecting the handsome structure out of the dimes and dollars of the school children and the public in general. There is no school child in the state that is not able to cast one vote in the contest, and many doubtless will cast scores of votes.

The contest is under the immediate supervision of the Educational Committee of the association, of which Professor H. C. Brownell of Louisville is chairman. Associated with Professor Brownell on the committee are some of the state's best known educators. None of them, however, will be eligible to election in this contest. It should be borne in mind that every county selects its own favorite teacher. To stimulate interest, however, the association has determined

A border design will give this a rug effect, as beautiful when viewed through the light-well from the second floor as from the first. The stairway leading to the second floor and four smaller rooms in the four corners used for gentlemen's reception and retiring room, check and custodian's rooms, take up the balance of the first floor. The second floor is similar to the first and will be for ladies, with the exception of having the rooms arranged at one end, so that they can be used as one large banquetting room. An attractive balustrade encircles the light-well in the center. Over the large reception hall will be a third floor level with the roof of the second story. A small space on this floor will be reserved for a serving room, which communicates with the first and second floors by a dumb waiter. The remainder of the floor will be used as a roof garden, and will be made as open as possible, to connect with the outer galleries formed of the roofs of the porches. The roof above the third floor, the main roof, will also be a cessahlo. For neighbors the Kentucky building will have California on one side and Minnesota on the other, facing Iowa and New Mexico.

SKY FULL OF WONDERS. One is fairly dazzled by the incomparable splendors of the ceremonies planned for Thursday, April 30, at the World's Fair, St. Louis. When congress postponed the exposition to 1904 provision was made for a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase and the dedication of the World's Fair buildings. The ceremonies on April 30 and May 1 and 2 of this year are planned in obedience to that law. President Roosevelt and cabinet, the judges of the supreme court, the diplomatic corps, governors of states, three famous bishops and many other distinguished men are to be present. Former President Cleveland will deliver the principal address. There will be monster parades of the military, numbering 15,000 men, and civic parades of 30,000 or more. The glorious festivities of each day will be followed by the grandest fireworks spectacles ever set off. Seats for 30,000 people in a grandstand 800 feet long have been arranged, and the fireworks display will cover a stretch of ground over half a mile long. The display is to be one of splendor.

ROBBED THE GRAVE. A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c. guaranteed. Sold by all druggists.

Man (to acquaintance)—"Hello, Grinsley, now are you getting on?" Grinsley—"So-so, only."

Man—"Are you still running that woman's rights paper?" Grinsley—"No, I have given that up."

Man—"Didn't pay, eh?" Grinsley—"Why didn't you continue to run it?"

Grinsley—"I got married."

A GREAT SENSATION.

There was a big sensation in Leesville, Ind., when W. H. Brown of that place, who was expected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. He writes: "I endured insufferable agonies from Asthma, but your New Discovery gave me immediate relief and soon thereafter effected a complete cure." Similar cures of Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and Grip are numerous. It's the peerless remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c. and $1.00. Sold by all druggists. Trial bottle free.

FOR Years the world has been told of the horrors practiced in the government of Russia and its possessions. Many of the stories told are undoubtedly true, and yet the present Czar of Russia has taken two of the most momentous and far reaching steps in the history of nations. It was he who a few years ago proposed the peace conference at the Hague, and only recently he has issued a decree granting religious liberty throughout his vast domains. Considering his surroundings, and the autocratic form of government in Russia, Nicholas is one of the most humane monarchs in the world, and is entitled to more than ordinary credit.

4000 Biblical Questions

To Be Asked and Answered in This Column.

18th—What awful act did Cain's jealousy of his brother lead to? The murder of his brother, his only brother.

19th—What fearful lie did he tell? He told the all-seeing God that he knew not where his murdered brother was.

20th—What did God say had cried to him? His brother's blood.

21st—In John 8:44, the devil is called a murderer. What is said of Cain in 1 John 3:10-12? In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: Who soever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother. For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another. That we should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one and slew his brother. And wherefore he slew him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

22nd—Did Cain procure for himself Satan's portion, a curse? See Gen. 4:11, 12.

23rd—What did Cain feel when God's curse lighted on him? That his punishment was greater than he could bear, as any one might kill him.

24th—Did God in mercy mitigate Cain's punishment? He set a mark upon him to prevent his being killed.

25th—What is meant by Cain's going from God's presence? He perhaps never heard him again, or saw him in the form he used to take, or felt his spirit within him. He left the place where his worship was held, and the place where his glory may have appeared. Gen. 3:24.

26th—When God takes vengeance into his own hand, will he let any one else perform it? God, to whom vengeance belongeth, says, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay." Rom. 12:19; Ps. 94:1.

27th—Is there a day of reckoning coming? It is appointed unto men once to die, and after that the judgment. Heb. 9:27.

THE ANTI-DILUVIAN PATRIARCHS.

GEN. 5.

1st—What is the allotted age of man now? Three score years and ten. Ps. 90:10.

2nd—Could we then have imagined it possible for men to have lived so long as the patriarchs, if the Bible had not informed us? We could not.

3rd—Place all these lives in a row, in long lines measured by 100 years, and say which lived the longest:

100 200 300 400 500 600 700 800 900
Adam.....
Seth.....
Enos.....
Cainan.....
Mahalaleel.....
Jared.....
Enoch.....
Methuselah.....
Lamech.....
Noah.....

4th—How is it that Enoch is so much shorter than the others? Because God took him to himself before he had lived half the usual time. It is a blessing to us, in life and in death, to live near unto God.

5th—What does the apostle in Heb. 11:5, say of Enoch? By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death.

6th—What remarkable prophecy of Enoch's does the apostle of Jude repeat? Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, Jude 14.

7th—To which coming of the Lord does it refer? To the first or second? The second.

8th—Is that second coming spoken of in other parts of the Bible? If so, where? In 1 Thes. 4:16, 17, and fifty other places at least.

9th—When Jesus came the first time, was it to execute vengeance. If not, what was the object? God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. John 3:17.

10th—What will be the design of the Lord's second coming? To judge the world.

11th—What remarkable likeness is there between the prophecy of God's first prophet and God's last prophet? Each foretold the coming of our Lord.

12th—What did John say? "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen." Rev. 1:7.

13th—Who guided those who wrote the Bible? The Holy Ghost. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

14th—Do we know when the Lord Jesus is coming? "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Matt. 24:42.

15th—What effect should this uncertainty as to our knowledge have upon us? The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless. 2 Pet. 3:10, 14.

A CARD.

The brethren in Christ, will be gratified to learn that Bro. J. L. Davis having purchased property at Gooch Town, in Pulaski county, will remove to it in a short time. Then we can hear the pure Gospel of Christ preached more often than we have been hearing it. As soon as the weather will permit he will hold a meeting at Mt. Carmel, about two miles north of Mt. Vernon, it will be held in God's sanctuary, in the open air. All that desire to worship God in His own divine plan will receive a hearty welcome on that occasion. Bro. J. L. Davis will tell you things that will do your soul good if you only heed the plain simple Gospel of Christ and not listen to cunningly devised fables of men and devils.

Mrs. Judith Chestnut is with her son, at the old home in this place.

J. S. Cash is making brooms now, as he owns a machine for the purpose.

James V. McCall, of Lyndon, Kan., is visiting his old Kentucky home, after an absence of 25 years. Miss Annie Owens, accompanied by her niece, Iola Owens, visited relatives here Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. Martin Owens failed to fill his appointment at Maretburg church on Sunday last on account of the inclemency of the weather.

$100.—REWARD.—$100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Dr. W. D. Crum, the negro appointed by President Roosevelt to be Collector of the Port at Charleston, S. C., may resign. It is said that a friend of President Roosevelt recently told him that such a course would prevent further bitterness and at the same time better the President's position.

BEAUTY AND STRENGTH.

Are desirable. You are strong and vigorous when your blood is pure. Many—very, most—women, fail to properly digest their food, and so become pale, sallow, thin and weak, while the brightness, freshness and beauty of the skin and complexion, depart. Remedy this unpleasant evil, by eating nourishing food, and taking a small dose of Herbine after each meal, to digest what you have eaten. 50c. At Chas. C. Davis' drugstore.

WALKS WITHOUT CRUTCHES. I was much afflicted with sciatica, writes Ed. C. Nud, Iowaville, Sedgwick county, Kan., "going about on crutches and suffering a deal of pain. I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment, which relieved me. I used three 50 cent bottles. It is the greatest liniment I ever used; have recommended it to a number of persons, all expressing themselves as being benefited by it. I now walk without crutches, and able to perform a great deal of light labor on the farm." 25c, 50c, and $1.00. Sold at Chas. C. Davis' drugstore.

PERSONAL

Mrs. Bettie Hoard is visiting relatives here.

Miss Mat Williams went to Louisville Tuesday.

Mrs. W. T. Davis is in very poor health at present.

Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Williams are both very sick.

Mrs. C. B. Henderson visited homefolks first of the week.

Miss Mollie Walden is stenographer for Bethurum & Bethurum.

Mrs. Dr. W. J. Childress, of Livingston, visited relatives here yesterday.

Rev. Mart Owens has been employed as pastor of the Mareburg church this year.

Mr. L. R. Hughes, of Stanford, and Mr. Mose Parks, of Parksville, were here Sunday.

Mrs. Lou and Miss Sallie Purcell spent Saturday until Monday with relatives here.

Minor Fish has had two promotions since he began work at Nashville a few months ago.

W. A. Carson, the Brodhead painter, is doing some work for Dr. John M. Williams.

W. R. Dillion and daughter, Miss Lynda, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Ballard yesterday.

U. G. Baker and L. W. Bethurum will go to Lebanon next Monday to take the Knight Templar's degree.

Mr. Harvey Chenault, of Conway, was here yesterday buying mules. He bought two at very fair prices.

Miss Eva Fish, one of our most charming and beautiful young ladies, was a guest of town relatives this week.

Mr. B. K. Bethurum, who is now getting very old and feeble, fell one day last week and hurt himself very seriously.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Bethurum, Mrs. A. G. Lovell and County Attorney L. W. Bethurum went to Louisville yesterday.

Mrs. Thos. Taylor was very seriously hurt yesterday afternoon, by a falling piece of timber striking her on the back.

Sheriff H. L. Tate has been very critically ill for the past several days but we are glad to say is now on the road to recovery.

Marion Denham got his new boiler moved yesterday. If we had more such hustlers as Marion, we would have a much better county.

J. J. Towery, who has been at Pittsburg for the past few weeks, on account of his health, returned yesterday with twelve pounds additional avoirdupoise.

Miss Margaret McClary spent Saturday until Monday with friends and relatives here. When her school closes in June, she will go to Jamestown, Ind., to make her home with her brother, W. E. McClary.

James McCall, a brother of "Jop's", who left here twenty-five years ago for the West, is back on a visit, the first he has ever made. He is now located at Lyndon, Kans., which is one of the best sections of the State.

J. A. Landrum, L. W. Bethurum, B. J. Bethurum, Judge S. D. Lewis and Jailer J. W. Parsons attended the meeting of the Masonic lodge at Brodhead Monday night. Geo. Brooks and Arch Brown were given the first degree. Harve Dunn and John Robins the second and Brent McClary and J. W. Tate the third.

Miss Mary Pease, who has been clerking for W. M. Hicks & Co., at Barbourville, for the past few months, has returned to her home at Pine Hill to spend a month or so practicing on her typewriter, and then will go to Bluefield, W. Va., to accept a position as stenographer for this splendid firm. Miss Pease completed the short-hand course at Bryant & Stratton Business College a few months ago.

Miss Rissie Williams is at home from Hamilton College to spend Easter.

Mr. Josh Griffith, candidate for State Treasurer, was here yesterday. We will have more to day about Mr. Griffith in our next issue.

Mr. J. Henry Fish has opened a saddlery and harness store in the room joining Dr. S. C. Davis' drug-store. He will also carry a full line of buggies.

Mrs. Mat Fish, of Crab Orchard, and daughter, Mrs. J. C. Rinehart, of Livingston, were guests of relatives here Tuesday night. Mrs. Fish has just returned from a long visit to California.

LOCAL

Come to Commercial Club meeting to-night.

Don't fail to read the "Commercial Club" article which appears in this issue.

Just a little effort and push now is all that is required and one enterprise, at least, will be established.

Rev. W. L. Brock will hold regular services at the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening, the 12th.

Don't forget to call on J. Thos. Cherry, Brodhead, Ky., when you get ready to buy your fertilizer.

If you can't do anything toward enterprises for goodness sake don't try to keep any away by talking against it.

Mr. Walters, father of Mrs. G. S. Griffin, died at Pineville, last Saturday night. His death was due to old age.

Jim Maret says, that if the party who borrowed his telephone piers are through with them, please bring them home.

Farmers around McKinney, Lincoln county, cultivate from one to thirty acres each of tomatoes. The same is the case at Kingsville.

The Fiscal court met Tuesday to fix the county levy, which was made the same as last year. 30 cents ad valorem and 12 1/2 cents road tax.

FOR SALE.—First-class young cow and calf, extra good for milk and butter.

J. H. ALBRIGHT, mar-27-31. Brodhead, Ky.

The L. & N. will sell tickets to Louisville May 13 and 19th, final limit May 21st at one fare plus 25 cents for the round trip, account of the G. A. R. Encampment.

Globe Fertilizer, the following brands and prices: Eagle, $23 per ton, Bone Dust, $21 per ton, Bone and Potash special $18 per ton at J. Thos. Cherry's Brodhead, Ky. apr-10-31.

The musical given at the College last Saturday night under the supervision of Prof. McDonald, was a great success in every particular. The violin solo by Master Jake Williams deserves special mention.

BRODHEAD FAIR.—August 19, 20 and 21, are the dates set for the holding of the Brodhead fair. Let us urge upon everyone the importance of lending a helping hand in every way possible towards making the fair a success.

Don't fail to visit my store and examine my elegant line of Spring and Summer Hats. Prices and quality can not be equalled anywhere. Don't take my word for it, but come and see for yourself.

MRS. E. S. ELMORE, Livingston, Ky.

Incorporation articles were filed in the office of Secretary of State at Frankfort Saturday by the Loudon Telephone Company, of Loudon county. It has $10,000 capital stock, and W. W. Rawlings, of Manchester; J. K. Lewis, of Loudon, and J. W. Creech, of East Bernstadt, are the incorporators. The company will connect Loudon, Manchester, McWhorter, Pittsburg, Benga and East Bernstadt.

We unintentionally failed to record in our last issue the marriage of Mr. Elmer Payne and Miss Katie Herrin, which took place at the residence of the Rev. J. C. Carmical last Saturday week. Mr. Payne is a son of Colby Payne, is a successful farmer and merchant in Pulaski county, while the bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cash Herrin, is a most attractive and cultured young lady.

The SIGNAL extends its hearty congratulations to them.

Globe Fertilizer, the best at J. Thos. Cherry's, Brodhead, Ky. apr-10-31.

FOR SALE.—I have for sale a limited number of Olanders, one and three years old. All sales must be made before transplanting.

J. P. LECHLEITER, Mt. Vernon, Ky.

"A SUMMER FAIRYLAND"

To those who are planning a summer outing and seeking "green fields and pastures new," some place where they can cast care aside and commune with primitive nature, where, tho' the sun shines ever brightly, cooling breezes always blow and great heat is unknown, it is safely promised that among the rocks and lakes of the Muskoka district, about 100 miles North of Toronto, situate in the Highlands of Ontario, (1000 feet above sea level), they will find enchantment.

Handsome illustrated, descriptive publications will be sent free to any address on application to R. McC. SMITH, Southern Passenger Agent Grand Trunk Railway, 124 Woodward Ave. Detroit.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolution of the L. O. T. M. of Mt. Vernon Hive No. 25 upon the death of Miss Georgie May Creed.

Whereas:—It has pleased an all powerful and loving God, to remove from our midst our dearly beloved sister, be it

Resolved:—That we deeply mourn the loss sustained by the Hive in the death of one whose memory will ever be dear to us.

Resolved:—That we extend our deepest sympathy to the surviving parent and brothers and sisters of the deceased.

Resolved:—That we send a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased; and also have them published in the MT. VERNON SIGNAL.

(Mrs.) ELIZABETH PURDOM, (Mrs.) NANNIE MILLER, (Mrs.) MARTHA PENNINGTON, Com.

COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Last Thursday, week ago, a meeting of the business and professional men of Mt. Vernon was convened at court house for the purpose of organizing a Commercial Club. Dr. A. G. Lovell was elected President and E. S. Albright Secretary. The following enrolled their names as members: Prof. C. R. Hunt, S. W. Davis, A. B. Furnish, W. A. B. Davis, J. J. Ping and Prof. F. J. Bevington. The regular meetings will take place every Tuesday night at court house. The object of the club is to bring the business men into closer relations, encourage and establish enterprises in way of factories, improvement of our roads and for progressiveness generally.

At the meeting last Tuesday night the following enrolled their names as members of the club: J. W. Brown, L. W. Bethurum, C. C. Williams, B. J. Bethurum, James Maret, J. E. Houk, Dr. M. L. Myers, Robert Cox, Jonas McKenzie, Eugene Mullins, G. W. Gentry, Jr., C. C. Davis, R. L. McFarron and W. L. Richards.

There will be a called meeting of the club to-night (Friday) when many new members are expected to join.

One of the first subjects to be taken up by the club was a canning factory. The matter was discussed at Tuesday's night's meeting and the following soliciting committee was appointed: Prof. C. R. Hunt, S. W. Davis and W. A. B. Davis, and they began work at once and soon secured subscription to the amount of $700. The necessary amount of $1500 will be secured in a short while, when the organization of the canning company will be established on a business basis and the enterprise pushed. Contracts will be made with gardeners and farmers for a large acreage of tomatoes to be raised this season. It is probable that only tomatoes will be canned this season though next year other vegetables and fruits may be added to the list.

LIVINGSTON

J. S. Calloway, of Altamont, was here with his many friends, Sunday. Contractor L. T. Bradford, of New Albany, Ind., was a guest at the Mullins Hotel, Tuesday.—J. E. Singleton is making a business trip in Jackson this week.

Rockcastle River is on a boom—a rabbit tide.—Lewis and Russell Dillion, of Lincoln county, were here last week.—W. C. Mullins spent a couple of days in Louisville this week.—Raymond Bentley returned to Morehead, Sunday.

after a holiday spent with homefolks.

Joe Childress has returned to his home at Brush Creek and consoles himself by singing, "When the corn is waving, Annie Dear, I will return to thee."—Mrs. Sarah Pettit is visiting friends, in Mt. Vernon, this week.—Miss Lucy Coffey, of Wildie, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Milla Pettit.—Alvie Reynolds, of Wildie, was also a guest of Mrs. Pettit, Sunday.

Mrs. Wilmoth Poynter left Wednesday, for a few days visit at Cincinnati and Covington.—Miss Cora Adams returned to Mt. Vernon, Monday, after a visit with her parents here.—Ottie Reynolds, of Mareburg is the guest of his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds.—Miss Susie Elmore returned to her home, near Rowland. She was the guest of Mrs. E. S. Elmore.—Miss Helen Singleton, of Crooked creek, visited her aunt, Mrs. J. E. Singleton, Sunday.

"Preacher" John Walton has a very serious attack of the gripe.—Mrs. Henry Owens has been very sick, but is improving rapidly.—Miss Kittie Poynter, of Mt. Vernon, is spending the week with relatives here.—Mrs. Joseph Coffey, of Stanford, has returned home, after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. W. R. Dillion and her old time friends and neighbors.—Misses Annie and Essie Roberts, who were the guests of Miss Lida Cook, returned to Gum Sulphur, Monday.—Mrs. Wm. Simpson and daughter, Miss Judith, of Pine Hill, were guests at the Sambrook Hotel, Tuesday and Wednesday.—Misses Nellie McFerron and Eva Hall, of Pine Hill, visited Mrs. W. J. Childress, this week.

Mrs. Mahala Carson has returned home, from Jellico, Tenn.—Miss Clara Griffin is on the sick list.—Mr. and Mrs. Dave Parker are rejoicing over the arrival of a ten pound son, born Monday April 6th.—Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Pike are the parents of a brand new baby girl, born Tuesday April 7th.—Mrs. W. R. Dillion and daughter, Miss Linda, have returned home, after an extended visit with relatives in Lincoln county.—Mrs. Mamie Maxey, of Woolridge, Tenn., is here visiting her mother, Mrs. Susie Patterson.—Revival services are being held at the Christian church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Hartsfield, of Mt. Vernon.—The entertainment given by the Lady Maccabees last Friday, was a decided success. The receipts were over $16.00.—The young people of the Baptist Sunday school have organized a band of "Willing Workers." They meet at Calloway Hall every Sunday afternoon. Everybody is welcome.

Sam Magee was wandering around here last Sunday—like a lost sheep. Wonder why he did not borrow a suit of Bill Mullins' or Jim Hocker's?—Madame Rumor says the "Parson" has decided not to go to Shelbyville, but will settle down here. Will tell you more later on.—Livingston is surely the mecca of milliners. Mrs. Singleton, of Stanford, is at Mrs. Francis Mershon's with a full line of hats, and Mrs. Martin, of Brush Creek, has a stock of millinery goods on Main street,—not forgetting our own little milliner, Mrs. E. S. Elmore, who believes in the adage, "Live and let live."—Censure and criticism never hurt anyone. If false, they can not hurt unless you are wanting in manly or womanly character, and if true they show you your weak points and forewarn against failure and trouble.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY, IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the matter of Robt. Graves, Bankruptcy. STANFORD, KY., April 6, 1903. A meeting of the Creditors of the above named, who has been adjudged a bankrupt in the above Court, will be held at the office of the Referee, Stanford, Ky., on the 16th day of April, 1903, at 9 o'clock a. m., to elect a trustee for the estate of said bankrupt and for any other business that may come before the meeting.

In making proof of your claim state the Court and the style of the cause as per above. Then comply with Section 57 of the Bankruptcy Act concerning proofs of claims; otherwise your claim can not be allowed. In making proof of claim it is not sufficient that the initials of the creditor's name appear, the Christian name should also appear.

J. N. SAUNDERS, Referee in Bankruptcy.

WILLIAMSBURG.

The frost last week damaged much fruit in this county.

There is a great demand here for dwelling houses. The hotels are full and there is not a vacant dwelling in town.

Mr. Frank Blakely, of this place, has taken stock in the Ice Plant at Jellico, and we hope to get our ice a little cheaper this year.

Wonders never cease in our town.

One of our druggists has a glass through which you can look and see plants growing. What will next?

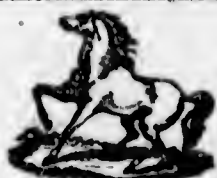

A. Deet & Son, of Barbourville, were here last week looking for a location in which to establish a branch of their business, which is the manufacture of water and oil tanks, and other supplies.

For several days we have noticed a peculiar agitation, and some strange movements of the young men of our town. Investigation disclosed the fact that Miss Lillian Stearns, of Ironton, O., was here visiting her aunt, and Mrs. W. E. Delaney. This reminds us of the way one of the heavenly bodies was discovered.

J. H. Francisco, one of our thriving merchants, is pretty hard to head off in anything he undertakes. He will not be out done, even by his father. When he read in the SIGNAL that his father, F. Francisco, of Brodhead, had a cow that made 60c a day, he came—a running with his hat off and said: "I want you to tell the readers of the SIGNAL that I have a cow which makes me 80c a day or $292.00 a year."

Another "gusher" came in this morning near the electric light plant in one of the wells being drilled by Mr. Courtlan Chenault. The oil came before it was expected and the men were not ready for it, and a great deal of it is going to waste. It is reported at this writing that oil is found in the well on the Smith farm, just south of town. This proves that Williamsburg, is built over a good oil field. The indications are that before this goes to press another gusher will come inside the city limits on Dr. Watkins' lot.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"What, what? Are you all here?" said the lawyer, peevishly. "Very irregular, very unseemly; your master would be far from pleased."

"They're all afraid," said Poole. Blank silence followed, no one protesting, only the maid lifted up her voice and now wept loudly.

"Hold your tongue!" Poole said to her, with a ferocity of accent that testified to his own jangled nerves; and indeed, when the girl had so suddenly raised the note of her lamentation, they had all started and turned toward the inner door with faces of dreadful expectation. "And now," continued the butler, addressing the knife boy, "reach me a candle, and we'll get this through hands at once." And then he begged Mr. Utterson to follow him, and led the way to the back garden.

"Now, sir," said he, "you come as quietly as you can. I want you to hear, and I don't want you to be heard. And see here, sir, if by any chance he was to ask you in, don't go."

Mr. Utterson's nerves, at this unexpected termination, gave a jerk that nearly threw him from his balance; but he recollected his courage and followed the butler into the laboratory building and through the sudden theatre of the number of crates and bottles, to the foot of the stairs. Here Poole motioned him to stand on one side and listen; while he himself, settling down the candle and making a great and obvious call on his resolution, mounted the steps and knocked with a somewhat uncertain hand on the red baize of the cabinet door.

"Mr. Utterson, sir, asking to see you," he called; and even as he did so, once more violently signed to the lawyer to give ear.

A voice from within: "Tell him I can not see any one," it said emphatically. "Thank you, sir," said Poole, with a note of something like triumph in his voice; and taking up his candle, he beat Mr. Utterson back across the yard and into the great kitchen, where the fire was out and the bottles were leaping on the floor.

"Sir," he said, "looking Mr. Utterson in the eyes, 'was that my master's voice?'"

"It seems to be," he changed, replied the lawyer, very faintly, but giving look for look. "Changed? Well, yes, I think so," said the butler. "I have been twenty years in this man's house, to be deceived about his voice? No, sir; master's made away with; he was made away with eight days ago, when we heard him cry out upon the name of God; and who's in there instead of him, and why it stays there, is a thing that cries to heaven, Mr. Utterson."

"Well, Mr. Utterson, you are a hard man to satisfy, but I'll do it yet," said Poole. "All this last week you must know him, or at least, whatever it is that lives in that cabinet, has been crying, night and day, for some sort of medicine, and can not get it to his mind. It was sometimes his way—the master's, that is—to write his orders on a sheet of paper, and throw it on the stairs. We've had nothing else this week back; nothing but papers, and a closed door, and the very meals left there to be smuggled in when nobody was looking. Well, sir, every day, night, and twice and thrice in the same day, there have been orders and complaints, and I have been sent flying to all the wholesale chemists in town. Every time I brought the stuff back, there would be another paper telling me to return it, because it was not pure, and another order to a different firm. This drug is wanted hotter and, sir, whatever for."

"Have you any of these papers?" asked Mr. Utterson.

Poole felt in his pocket and handed out a crumpled note, which the lawyer, bearding nearer to the candle, carefully examined. Its contents ran thus: "Dr. Jekyll presents his compliments to Messrs. Maw. He assures them that their last sample is impure and quite useless for his present purpose. In the year 18—, Dr. J. purchased a somewhat large quantity from Messrs. M. He now begs them to search with the most sedulous care, and should any of the same quality be left, to forward it to him at once. Expense is no consideration. The importance of this to Dr. J. can hardly be exaggerated." So far the letter had run composedly enough; but here, with a sudden splutter of the pen the writer's emotion had broken loose. "For God's sake," he added, "find me some of the old."

"This is a strange note," said Mr. Utterson; and then sharply, "How do you come to have it open?"

"The man at Maw's was main angry, sir, and he threw it back to me like so much dirt," returned Poole.

"This is unquestionably the doctor's hand, do you know?" resumed the lawyer.

"I thought it looked like it, sir," said the servant rather sulkily; and then, with another voice, "But what matters hand of write," he said, "I've seen him!"

"Seen him?" repeated Mr. Utterson.

"That's it!" said Poole. "It was this way: I came suddenly into the theater from the garden. It seems he had slipped out to look for this drug or whatever it is; for the cabinet door was open, and there he was at the far end of the room digging among the crates. He looked up when I came in, gave a kind of cry, and whipped up-stairs into the cabinet. It was but for one minute that I saw him, but the hair stood upon my head like quills. Sir, if that was my master, why had he a mask upon his face? If it was my master, why did he cry out like a rat, and from me? I have served him for thirty years. And then—"

"The man whose hand he passed his hand over—"

"Yes, except—"

"These are all very strange circumstances," said Mr. Utterson, "but I think I begin to see daylight. Your master, Poole, is plainly seized with one of those maladies that both torture and deform the sufferer; hence, for aught I know, the alterations of his voice; hence the mask and the avoidance of his friends; hence his eagerness to find this drug, by means of which the poor soul retains some hope of ultimate recovery—God grant that he be not deceived! There is my explanation; it is sad enough, Poole, and appalling to consider; but it is plain and natural, hangs well together, and delivers us from all extraordinary alarms."

"Sir," said the butler, turning to a sort of mottled pallor, "that thing was not my master, and there's the truth. My master—here he looked round him and began to whisper—'is a tall, thin, dark man, and this was more of a dwarf. No, sir, that thing in the mask was never Doctor Jekyll—God knows what it was, but it was never Doctor Jekyll; and it is the belief of my heart that there was murder done.'"

"Poole," replied the lawyer, "if you say that, it will become my duty to make certain. Much as I desire to spare your master's feelings, much as I am puzzled by this note which seems to prove him to be still alive, I shall consider it my duty to break in that door."

"Ah, Mr. Utterson, that's talking!" cried the butler.

"And now comes the second question," resumed Utterson; "Who is going to do it?"

"Why, you and me," was the undaunted reply.

"That's very well said," returned the lawyer; "and whatever comes of it, I shall make it my business to see you are no loser."

"There is an ax in the theater," continued Poole; "and you might take the kitchen poker for yourself."

The lawyer took that rude but weighty instrument into his hand and balanced it. "Do you know, Poole," he said, looking up, "that you and I are about to place ourselves in a position of some peril?"

"You may say so, sir, indeed," returned the butler.

"It is well, then, that we should be frank," said the other. "We both think more than we have said; let us make a clean breast. This masked figure that you saw, did you recognize it?"

"Well, sir, it went so quick, and the creature was so doubled up, that I could hardly swear to that," was the answer. "But if you mean, was it Mr. Hyde?—why, yes, I think it was! You see, it was much of the same build; and it had the same quick light way with it; and then who else could have got in by the laboratory door? You have not forgot, sir, that at the time of the murder he had still the key with him? But that's not all. I don't know, Mr. Utterson, if ever you met this Mr. Hyde?"

"Yes," said the lawyer, "I once spoke with him."

"Then you must know as well as the rest of us that there was something queer about the gentleman—something that gave a man a turn—I don't know rightly how to say it, sir, beyond this; that you felt it in your marrow kind of cold and thin."

"I own I felt something of what you describe," said Mr. Utterson.

"Quite so, sir," returned Poole. "Well, when that masked thing like a monkey jumped from among the chemicals and whipped into the cabinet, it went down my spine like ice. Oh, I know it's not evidence, Mr. Utterson; I'm book learned enough for that; but a man has his feelings, and I give you my Bible word it was Mr. Hyde!"

"Ay, ay," said the lawyer. "My fears incline to the same point. Evil, I fear, founded—evil was sure to come of that conversation. Ay, truly, I believe you; I believe poor Harry is killed, and I believe his murderer—for what purpose, God alone can tell—is still lurking in his victim's room. Well, let our name be vengeance. Call Bradshaw."

The footman came at the summons, very white and nervous. "Call yourself together, Bradshaw," said the lawyer, "this suspense, I know, is telling upon all of you; but it is now our intention to make no end of it. Poole, here, and I are going to force our way into the cabinet. If all is well, my shoulders are broad enough to bear the blame. Meanwhile, lest anything should really be amiss, or any malefactor seek to escape by the back, you and the boy must go round the corner with a pair of good sticks, and take your post at the laboratory door. We give you ten minutes to get there."

CHAPTER IX.

"And now, Poole, let us get to ours," he said; and taking the poker under his arm, led the way into the yard. The ax had banked over the moon, and it was now quite dark. The wind, which only broke in puffs and draughts into the deep well of the building, tossed the light of the candle and the boy. As they reached the door a light footfall was heard on the inside.

"So it will walk all day sir," whispered Poole; "and the better part of the night. Only when a new sample comes from the chemist, there's a bit of a break. Ah, it's an ill conscience that's such an enemy to rest! Ah, sir, there's blood foully shed in every step of it! But hark again, a little closer—put your heart in your ears, Mr. Utterson, and tell me, is that the doctor's foot?"

The steps fell lightly and oddly, with a certain swing, for all they went so slowly; it was different indeed from the heavy creaking tread of Henry Jekyll. Utterson sighed. "Is there never anything else?" he asked.

Poole nodded. "Once," he said, "once I heard it was—"

"Once?"

"Once, heard it was—"

"Once, heard it was—"

"Once, heard it was—"

"Weeping? how's that?" said the lawyer, conscious of a sudden thrill of horror.

"Weeping like a woman or a lost soul?" said the butler. "I came away with that upon my heart, that I could have wept too."

But now the ten minutes drew to an end. Poole disinterred the ax from under a stack of packing-stuff; the candle was set upon the nearest table to light them to the attack; and they drew near with bated breath to where that patient foot was still going up and down, up and down, in the quiet of the night.

"Jekyll," cried Utterson, with a loud voice, "I demand to see you." He paused a moment, but there came no reply. "I give you five seconds, and unless you are aroused, and I must and shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul—if not of your consent, then by brute force!"

"Utterson," said the voice, "for God's sake, have mercy!"

"Ah, that's not Jekyll's voice—it's Hyde's!" cried Utterson. "Down with the door, Poole!"

Poole swung the ax over his shoulder; the blow shook the building, and the red pane door leaped against the locks and hinges. A dismal screech, as of mere animal terror, rang from the cabinet. Up went the ax again, and again the panels crashed and the frame bounded; four times the blow fell; but the wood was tough and the fittings were of excellent workmanship; and it was not until the fifth that the lock burst in sunder and the wreck of the door fell inward on the carpet.

The besiegers, appalled by their own riot and the stillness that had succeeded, stood back a little and peered in. There lay the cabinet before their eyes in the quiet lamplight, a good fire glowing and chattering on the hearth, the kettle singing its thin strain, a drawer or two open, papers neatly set forth on the business table, and nearer the fire, the things laid out for tea; the quietest room, you would have said, and but for the glazed presses full of chemicals, the most commonplace that night in London.

Light in the midst there lay the body of a man sorely contorted and still twitching. They drew near on tiptoe; turned it on its back and beheld the face of Edward Hyde. He was dressed in clothes far too large for him, clothes of the doctor's big nest; the cords of his face still moved with a seming of life, but life was quite gone; and by the crushed vital in his hand and the strong smell of kernels that hung upon the air, Utterson knew he was looking on the body of a self-destroyer.

"We have come too late," he said sternly, "whether to save or punish; Hyde is gone to his account, and it only remains for us to find the body of your innater."

The far greater proportion of the building was occupied by the theater, which filled almost the whole ground, and was lighted from above, and by the cabinet, which formed an upper story at one end and looked upon the court. The corridor joined the theater to the door on the by-street, and with this the cabinet communicated separately by a second flight of stairs. There were besides a few dark closets and a spacious cellar. All these they now thoroughly examined. Each closet needed but a cursory examination and when they opened the door to the corridor they were apprised of the uselessness of further search by the fall of a perfect mat of cobweb which had for years sealed up the entrance. Nowhere was there any trace of Henry Jekyll, dead or alive.

Poole stamped on the flags of the corridor. "He must be buried here," he said, hearkening to the sound.

"Or he may have fled," said Utterson, and he turned to examine the door in the by-street. It was locked; and lying near by on the flags, they found the key, neatly stained with rust.

"This does not look like use," observed the lawyer.

"Is it?" echoed Poole. "Do you not see, sir, it is broken? much as if a nim had stamped on it?"

"Ay," continued Utterson, "and the fractures, too, are rusty." The two men looked at each other with a stare. "This is beyond me, Poole," said the lawyer. "Let us go back to the cabinet."

They mounted the stair in silence, and still with an occasional aversive glance at the dead body, proceeded more thoroughly to examine the contents of the cabinet. At one table, there were traces of chemical work, various measured heaps of some white salt being laid on glass saucers, as though for an experiment in which the unhappy man had been prevented.

"That is the same drug that I was always bringing him," said Poole; and even as he spoke, the kettle with a startling noise boiled over.

This brought them to the fireless, where the easy-chair was drawn cozily up, and the tea things stood ready to the sifter's elbow, the very sugar in the cup. There were several books on a shelf; one lay beside the tea things open, and Utterson was amazed to find it a copy of pious work, for which Jekyll had several times expressed a great esteem, annotated, in his own hand, with startling blasphemies.

Next, in the corner of their review of the chamber, the searchers came to the chival-glass, into whose depths they looked with an involuntary horror. But it was so turned as to show them nothing but the rosy glow playing on the roof, the fire sparkling in a hundred repetitions along the glazed front of the presses, and their own pale and fearful countenances stopping to look in.

"This glass has seen some strange things, sir," whispered Poole. "And surely none stranger than itself," echoed the lawyer in the same tones. "For what did Jekyll?"—he caught himself up at the words with a start, and then conquering the weakness—"what could Jekyll want with it?" he said.

"You may say that!" said Poole.

Next they turned to the business table. On the desk among the nest army of papers, a large envelope was uppermost, and bore, in the doctor's hand, the name of Mr. Utterson. The lawyer mislaid it, and several inclosures fell to the floor. The first was a will, drawn in the same eccentric terms as the one which he had returned six months before to serve as a testament in case of death and as a deed of gift in case of disappearance; but in place of the name of Edward Hyde, the lawyer, with indescribable amazement, read the name of Gabriel John Utterson. He looked at Poole, and then back at the paper, and last of all at the dead malefactor stretched upon the carpet.

"My head goes round," he said. "If he has been all these days in possession, he had no cause to like me; he must have hated to see himself displaced; and he has not destroyed this document."

He caught up the next paper; it was a brief note in the doctor's hand and dated at the top. "Oh, Poole!" the lawyer cried, "he was alive and here this day. He can not have been disposed of in so short a space; he must be still alive; he must have fled! And then, why flee? and how? and in that case, can we venture to declare this suicide? Oh, we must be careful. I foresee that we may yet involve your master in some dire catastrophe."

"Why don't you read it, sir?" asked Poole. The lawyer read:

"When this reaches your hands, I shall have disappeared, under what circumstances I have not the penetration to foresee; but my instinct and all the circumstances of my nameless situation tell me that the end is sure and must be early. Go then, and first read the narrative which Lanyon warned me he was to place in your hands; and if you care to hear more, turn to the confession of 'Your unworthy and unhappy friend, 'HENRY JEKYLL.'"

"There was a third inclosure?" asked Utterson.

"Here, sir," said Poole, and gave into his hands a considerable packet sealed in several places.

The lawyer put it in his pocket. "I would say nothing of this paper, if your master has fled or is dead, we may at least save his credit. It is now 10; I must go home and read these documents in quiet; but I shall be back before midnight, when we shall read for the police."

They went out, looking the door of the theater behind them; and Utterson, once more leaving the servants gathered about the fire in the hall, trudged back to his office to read the two narratives in which this mystery was now to be explained.
